

CONNEMARA NATIONAL PARK MONUMENTS

Connemara National Park is situated within an area rich in archaeological and historical sites as you will see from the map below; sites dating from as far back as the the Mesolithic (Stone Age), circa 10,000 years ago, in the form of coastal middens . The National Park is proud to be able to participate in the protection of these monuments for our future generations. The red dots represent the sites on the National Monuments database and the blue dots are listed on the National Inventroy of Architectural Heritage. Detailed information of these sites can be accessed on www.archaeology.ie

© Ordnance Survey Ireland | Copyright Government of Ireland Licence No. EN 0059216 and DigitalGlobe, Inc. Licensed for re-use under the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International licence

Neolithic Court Tombs

The remains of these two Neolithic Court tombs within the park prompted a detailed archaeological survey of the park which is ongoing.

West Tomb

East Tomb

Other Discoveries

The following images highlight some of the new discoveries within our National Park including pre bog walls (possibly Neolithic farming), hut sites and standing stones, usually associated with the Bronze Age.

Hut Site

Pre Bog Wall

CONNEMARA NATIONAL PARK MONUMENTS

Hut Site

Standing Stones

Hut Site

Standing Stones

Pre Bog Wall

Ancient Walls

Hut in Bog

Hut Site